

Jean Hall

Volunteer

Audubon of Western Everglades Owl Watch

As a 38 year International Flight Attendant, Jean traveled the world with her camera. In the last decade, she has concentrated on her passion...nature and especially birds...through her camera lens. After retiring from both her flight attendant job and her work in production at NBC Sports (working 5 Olympic Games, earning 2 Emmys) she has had the time to become a Florida Master Naturalist and a volunteer for Audubon of the Western Everglades, Audubon Florida and Project Puffin in Maine. She was Audubon Florida's 2015 Volunteer of the year and was honored in the 2016 Audubon Photography Awards Top 100 for a Roseate Spoonbill image.

She says "The joy I've gotten back is 100 times more than what I give as a volunteer. I am thrilled to work alongside skilled field biologists and I hope it informs my photography. To be able to help the cause of bird conservation with my work is priceless."
